

1993 ... the second Gig push

Corsair reaches one of the narrower parts of Church Hill, leaving little room for the 'pushers'

it was pretty hard going this year; last year ropes had been attached to the gig and were many people pulling as well as pushing. This year there were no ropes - unanimously agreed as a mistake that will be rectified in 1994.

The plan was to row back to Port Isaac from Port Quin with sponsors guessing the time it would take. However, the weather had other ideas and it was impossible for the return row to take place and the gig had to be towed back to Port Isaac.
