

The memoirs of John Trevan 1834

Glebe Church

(Glebe is an area of land within an ecclesiastical parish used to support a parish priest)

The church is a neat structure. It consists of a nave, chancel, and side aisles, with an embattled tower at the west end ...

The Revd. William Hockin, the rector, has been inducted into this living about three years since ...

The tithes etc. of this parish is estimated to be worth about £800 per ann ... but God knows how long the country is going to put up with those extractions. I cannot conceive wherein consists the Policy of Cherishing as many nests of spiritual and lay leeches, who suck the very blood and vitals of the nation; they that support them in it are nothing better than a company of greedy caterpillars, enemies to their fellow subjects, and a curse to the prosperity of their country.

In the ends of the seats within the church are several armorial bearings, supposed to be those of the neighbouring gentry who contributed to the erection and support of this church [they are actually symbols of the Passion - cross, crown of thorns, nails, scourge, etc.].

Cheney Arms, Roscarrock in part

Roscarrock in part, Grenville of Stowe in the Parish of Kilkhampton

The Arms of Baddon

Unknown Pew Ends at St Endellion Church

Roscarrock Stone

St. Endellion Church Town is home to the families of Revd. W. Hockin, Mr. Richardson Gray, Innkeeper, Thos Brown, Sexton, Nicholas Halford, Mrs. Gray, Martha Lobb, William Sancoe, Edward Brown (commonly called 'Purty Harry') and P. Hill, husband in America making a total of 32 inhabitants.

HIGHTERTOWN. Formerly belonged to the Cock family, but lately sold, but it is held on lease by Mrs. Joan Cock of Port Isaac, and tenanted by William Blake (3 in family) and Betsy Hewett (5 in family).

Thos Brown, the sexton, bought a field or two here, not long ago since, from the Cock family, for which he paid, it is said, all in new half crowns and shillings looking as fresh as when they came from the mint.

TREVATHEN, GRAYS. This estate has been in the family of the Grays for centuries ... and passed as harmlessly through all the vicissitudes of time and different commotions in church and state, in perfect security, to the present time ...

TREVATHEN, PETERS. This estate originally belonged to the Robartes of Lanhydrock, who sold it several generations ago to the Peter family of Harlyn near Padstow ...

TOLRAGGATT. 187 acres, 1 rod, 10 perches. Purchased some years since by the late Mr. John Collings who made a handsome fortune in the Buonaparte War...

ROSWARROW GUY'S. This farm has been in the possession of the Guy family for several generations. Mr. Jonathan Guy is the present owner and who farms it himself. Married his cousin Miss Gray of Trevathen by whom have seven or eight children.

Gray's Trevathen 1834

ROSWARROW GRAY'S. Mr. Guy Gray is the present possessor of the estate and in whose family it has been for a great number of years. farms it himself ...

William Brown has a house and garden here on lease, the land of which now belong to Mr. Guy. Roswarrow was at one period a village, many families residing here ...

TRECREEGE. Commonly called 'Burrowpark'. The property of Mr. Warwick Guy ...

TRECREEGE HIGGS. Originally the property of the Hon. Mrs. Agar but on lease to Mr. Jonathan Higgs ...
Mr. Richard Higgs of Trecreege. A small tenement about ten or twelve acres, purchased by him from Mr. John Collings of Saint Minver. Farmed by himself.