

Around the village of Trelights are several small farms and tenements. They are as follows:

Mr. Warwick George's Farm ... he married Miss Sarah Brown, his cousin, by whom have two children.

A few years since, as a person by the name of Richd. Inch was plowing in one of those fields belonging to Mr. George, adjoining Endellion Lane, the plow suddenly skeered over a flat stone which, on being removed, a perfect human body of a lad, apparently of about sixteen years of age, presented itself to view, which on its being touched immediately mouldered into dust. All the fields around Endellion church town are full of graves, but it was not suspected that they extended down so far as this.

Mr. Thomas Collings's. About the number of acres as the above ... He farms it himself but it is said it is deeply mortgaged ... Here at one period stood a fine mansion house said to have belonged to the family of Kirkums ...

Trelights has 18 inhabitants, that is to say housekeepers, with 93 inmates.

TREWETHICK GUY'S. Originally is supposed to have belonged to the Roscarrock's. From there, thro' different families into that of the Cocks, from whom it has been recently purchased by Mr. Warwick Guy of Trecreege.

TREWETHICK. F. Grenville Esquire of Catchfrench has a farm around this place, tenanted by Mr. William Gray ...

TREWETHICK, WILLIAM BULLERS TENEMENT. The property of the Cock family, but on lease to Buller ...

JACOB, JACOB'S TENEMENT. Formerly the property of the Cocks but this Jacob's lease, laterly bought by him for the sum of £45.

The Methodist mercinary mendicant harpies have, here, likewise, a shop for fleecing the poor bumkins of their very hard earnings, beside their having managed to swindle the people out of this chapel as they have almost every other throughout the country wherewith they have any connexion. But those worthies, it is to be hoped, will very soon have a fall. They are like unto a waterspout, soaring up on high to an immense head and being no longer able to sustain its great weight, will tumble down with a boisterous and tremendous splash, which their pride, bigotry, and duplicity so well merit.

TREWINT most probably at one time belonged to the Roscarrocks, from them to have passed through different possessors into that of the Broad family, the last of which sold it to a Thomas Skinner, a shoemaker, whose grandson recently sold it to Mr. Mark Guy of Roscarrock, by whom it is now farmed ...

SCAROBINE. There is every reason to believe it formerly belonged to the Roscarrocks ... This fine estate is tithe free and now is, and has been, tenanted by the George family for many years.

“Mr. Mark Guy has a fine estate of overland tenement, commonly called the ‘Port Quin Ground’, some part of which is on lease to John Hawke, the miller, supposed originally to have been the property of the Roscarrocks ... It is traditionally said that one of the Roscarrocks gave it to a girl whom he kept at Port Quin.”
